

IHY – IPY Open Doors Day June 10th, 2007

Following the discussions on outreach activities during the first European General Assembly of IHY, an “Open Doors Day” has been scheduled on June 10th, 2007. All laboratories/observatories/institutes whose investigation topics are related to the International Heliophysical Year (IHY) and the International Polar Year (IPY) are invited to participate.

The basic idea is to welcome the public in the research institutes to explain our work and science. Some institutes may have some difficulties in hosting public in their own place. So any other kind of animation is welcome: exhibitions in the main city places, science bars discussions, talks in museum, radio and/or TV shows etc ...

The list of the institutes already involved is rapidly increasing: at the present time 47 institutes, museums and planetarium all over Europe have committed themselves, plus three outside the European frontiers. The list and a short description of some activities in some of them is available on the European website : <http://www.lesia.obspm.fr/IHY>

It is not too late to join us !
